C. Thompson, of the bank staff, unpack to get to Winnipeg in time to attend his sister's wedding on Wednesday. The trials of the overland trip to Champion were something deeply impressed upon Tommy himself, as well as his fellow passenger, Post Office Inspector Stewart. The Inspector was snow-bound here from Wednesday till Monday and got pretty itchy over the fact before he said good-bye. It is to be hoped that his report will contain recommendations that will re-act to the benefit of our mail service.

o o o

Another startling surprise of the week was the arrival of Tuesday's train on time.

The consolidated van route drivers have not been giving the best service possible and the board is up against making some remedial arrangements. REPATRIATION

The work of Repatriation is no one-man's job—it is the duty and privilege of every citizen of the Dominion of Canada.

The war was not the work of the soldiers alone—it was the task of every Canadian, it is our pride as a whole we recognized that, and set a standard for self-sacrificing, intelligent joyful service not surpassed in any country.

The war is not yet won. These soldier boys who have been in the midst of alarms for four years and more still suffer from its effects, although many very many are coming home physically sound. These boys must change their whole scheme of living. Their outlook on life must be changed. To do so, they will need help. They will need sympathetic, kindly treatment. That is where everybody can help. Not all have jobs to offer. The men must have satisfactory work with proper compensation. A body of public sentiment must be created in favor of giving the returned men, every possible show to make him the self supporting man that he wants to be. Meet him when he comes home. Give him a glad hand. Smooth out his little difficulties. Be kindly, sympathetic to wards him, and then help him to get a good position. And when he gets that position, be still sympathetic with him, so he may get back to that place in the community to which his talents fit him, but which his experience has in a sense unfitted him.

Repatriation is a big problem, but the solution can and will be found in patient, kindly treatment.

The Land Settlement scheme is under way. The Government will secure land for the men who want to go on the farms. The Provincial Governments are co-operating in a most splendid manner. Soldier farming communities will shortly dot the land.

After a grand review of German troops at Potsdam the kaiser called out to the officer commanding the Prussian Guard, in a voice loud enough to be heard by all the distinguished guests who were grouped in front of the palace "Pick me out a hundred men from the Prussian Guard!" Then taking the arm of King Edward VII., who was there, he said "Come with me," round the hundred men then said banteringly: "well, do you think you could find a men in England to beat them?" "I don't know," promptly replied the late King, "but I could easily find fifty who would try."

AMETHYST HAS A MARK TWAIN

The ladies are all assembled Mrs. McSquinty takes the chair.

Mrs. McSquinty: "Ladies, I take great pleasure in calling this meeting to order. I am sure you all understand the high and lofty principles of the Red Cross Society and the great work it is doing. You ought to. You have heard me tell it enough times. In our own small way we are helping to win the war. For our own brave boys at the front must have the things that we are making, to assist them to defeat the Germans. And, besides, it helps the community at large by giving our women folks a chance to get together to discuss the faults and excesses of the erring ones in our midst. And, believe me, friends, it has a good effect on them, for when they know that their evil ways will be brought to light they go a little slower. Just the day I heard one of them say, 'Go easy boys, the Red Cross will find you out.' Well ladies, lets get down to work we can talk after the war is won. Has any one a bit of news that may be of interest to us?"

Mrs. Newone, who was a new member not being familiar with the workings of the society ventures, "Seth Holme's big horse died yesterday." Mrs. McSquinty gave a withering look of scorn and her eyes began to spit fire and the old had grave fears for the personal safety of the offending one.

"Was it through any fault of Seth's that his horse died?" asked the fair chairwoman.

"Oh no," apologized Mrs. Newone, "it just naturally died of colic."

"Well we will have you know," snapped Mrs. McSquinty, "that we don't indulge in any petty gossip like that affects the of people in general that we take up at all. Now ladies have any of you any real news?" The new member sank back into her chair confused and feeling very ill at ease. Now Mrs. La Kisseum, having had more experience with the work and knowing what manner of news was required, volunteered this choice bit of news. "I was just hearing the other day that young Pretty Swift had something in him at the dance on Friday night. Mrs. McSquinty up and began to take notice. The lower extremity of her face come up with a click. Her scissors came down on the unoffending head of a youthful son of Adam, whom she had evidently mistaken for that of the offender, with a bang. "I thought as much, I always knew he was good for nothing," she roared. Her remarks were unheeded however for by this time everybody else was roaring too. There was wailing, and lamentations, exclamations of surprise, dismay, and righteous indignation on all sides. While this was at its height Mrs. McSquinty leaned over and whispered into the wee pink ear of the lovely Mrs. La Kisseum, "I heard something about Dam Fast I would like to tell you but as his sister is here I dares'nt." When the noise had subsided a little Mrs. Newone, who had recovered from her shock, ventured once more. "But ladies! you're not sure that he really tried to kiss a girl. hadn't you better wait till you get a few more facts."

"Sure and be hanged," stormed Mrs. McSquinty, "we all know he would do it if he got the chance. Do tell us some more, Mrs. LaKisseum."

"Well I dont know much more about it," resumed Mrs. LaKisseum, "but my husband was just saying this morning

NOTES

This is a good time to start the organization of a base ball league for towns along this line. But let's all play our own amateur players.

o o o

What think ye of the weekly half holiday for this summer? We're for it hands down.

o o o

Seems good to bump into a daily paper again, even though it is padded with bull on Lord Beaverbrook.

o o o

To any persons who are fortunate enough to be affected by the income tax act, we refer them to the advertisement in this issue containing instructions on how to proceed. To our mind this is the most equitable system of taxation and we only wish we owed the government about five thousand on this account.

o o o

Lomond's nuisance ground is developing itself into sort of a nuisance the authorities. A general kick is being made over the present choice of a site.

o o o

There is more truth than fiction to Sir Sam Hughes' charges in the Dominion house, even if it does air a hundred million dollar skeleton.

o o o

The Post Office Inspector suggests changing the name of the town so as not to conflict with the town of Lamont. This is something that should have been done four years ago, not now. What we agitate is to write Lomond on the map large enough so that our Low-mand friends can see their mistake. If the department would agitate itself a little more about the mail service we could still worry along with the same old name.

Ontario Has a Claim.

In the price which the people of Canada will be called upon to pay for the equity in the common stock of the Canadian Northern Railway the Ontario Government is going to have something to say. Before the Board of Arbitrators now sitting at Osgoode Hall the Government has presented a claim for $213,204 for timber dues, fire-ranging and other charges for which the railway is in default. The Government has also stated that the railway company cannot establish that the land grant offered in 1909 as a subsidy for the construction of the line from Sellwood to Port Arthur is an asset. The company, in the first place, failed to enter into an agreement with the Government under which the grant might be made, and accordingly the land grant has not been earned. On the other hand there is a provision in the statute that if at any time the railway was taken over by the Government of Canada any subsidy given should be returned to the province.

Curious Medals.

In Holland curio hunters are giving quite large prices for medals struck to commemorate events which, very inconsiderably, did not come off. This is a new hobby for Dutchmen provided by their neighbor Germany. The medals have either never been publicly issued or have been withdrawn upon the failure of the military operations they were meant to celebrate. One of them represented the capture of Verdun. It is not at all easy to obtain.

It isn't easy living up to the reputation of being a wit, but Jimkins did his best.

Meeting a friend one morning he said suddenly: "I say, old fellow, have you heard about the girl who poured a jug of water into her fiancée's top hat?"

"No," replied his friend, getting ready to hear an excellent little anecdote.

"Neither have I," said Jimkins, as he began to walk quickly away. "It hasn't leaked out yet."

GREAT BRITAIN'S WAR SAVINGS CAMPAIGN

War Savings Certificates were first placed on sale in Great Britain on February 22, 1916. Between that date and January 18, 1919 inclusive, 287,030,200 Certificates were sold. These represented $1,435,151,000. Of this amount the redemptions amount to a little over 4 per cent.

The sales by years are as follows:—
1916 Certificates sold... 54,394,053
1917 " " " 82,395,268
1918 " " " 140,761,865

As the financial year does not end until March 31, it is quite probable that the sales during the present fiscal year will exceed those of last by 30 per cent. That the sale of Certificates is continuing strong may be seen in the fact that for the week ending January 11, 1919, sales brought $11,500,000; while for that ending January 18, they were about $17,000,000.

It should be borne in mind that while these millions of War Savings Certificate were being sold, the sale of National War Bonds reached the huge total of $8,226,688,670. The sale of these bonds began on October 1, 1917, and ended on January 18, 1919, which means during the 68 weeks of the issue the average weekly sale amounted to $120,000,000.

At first the sale of War Savings Certificates was attended with disappointing results, possibly because it was hedged about by cumbersome restrictions.

It was not until these were removed in June of 1916 that appreciable results were secured. Even though the War feeling has subsided the sale of Certificates was continued to be very brisk, 3,428,191 having been sold during the week ending January 18, which average, if maintained, would double the sales for 1917.

"DAD AND ME"

These lines were written in France by Corporal James of Big Rock, Ill., a brother of Mrs. Evans Hughes of Armada.

Me and Old Dad Florain,
We're seeing things in France;
'Twas not the kind of seeing
That you'd pay much for the chance,
But anyway we're over here,
A-seeing-every day
And holding down a steady job
With just steady pay.

Now, some, they choose the infatry
And some took to the sea,
But driving mules and horses
Rather suited Dad and me.
We signed up in the transport
One year ago last May,
So with the team and wagon
We are sticking right today.

I signed my name at 22
And Dad just 10 years more;
Dad hit the scales at two-o-five
And I at one forty-four.
Say, when a place looks pretty warm
It's nice to have in mind,
Just step right in and do your best
'Cause Dad is right behind.

We've seen our share of dug outs,
With their cooties, rats and mice;
All kinds of brand new insects
With a million kinds of lice;
With bully beef and hard-tack
We have learned to make a hit,
'Cause there isn't any use kicking
We are here to do our bit.

We've shook the bulk at two and three
And drove both day and night,
Been 'round where Jerry dropped a few
And nearly died of fright;
Seen lots of things w'd like to tell,
And lots that wouldn't do,
Have seen some sights we read about
And some we never knew

We don't expect to hop the bags,
Nor pull the hero stuff,
The boys that do can have our share
When Jerry says "Enough."
We'll just keep on a hauling
So the boys may fill there kit,

And I think when this thing's over
That we have done our bit.

When Satan has a visitor
For breakfast about nine,
And Kaiser Bill is absent
From his home along the Rhine.
We hope to be right with the boys
That march back to the sea,
'Cause home sweet home,
Will surely look derved good to Dad
and me.

An auction sale of the property of the late Lot Hale will take place five miles of town on March 18th.
